Answer received for publication on 19 September 2011

The Minister for Housing, Regeneration and Housing (Huw Lewis): The Welsh Government is committed to safeguarding and regenerating our town centres; this is reflected in our policies and programmes, ranging from those for the historic and built environment, housing, business support, transport and tourism.

With our focus on seven Regeneration Areas we are working with organisations across Wales to deliver regeneration strategies for a number of small towns. Our role is to provide direction, wherever required, and support or add value to regeneration activities. Although there are similar issues affecting all towns, we believe that each town has unique issues that require bespoke solutions. These will be delivered by local people, the people who know and understand their communities.

Our involvement can vary from supporting an EU physical regeneration scheme in Ebbw Vale, a business support programme in Blaenavon, transport interchange improvements in Prestatyn or a town improvement grant in Aberystwyth.

We will continue our efforts to regenerate our town centres through planning policies, breathing new life into towns by safer and better quality design, developing family friendly environments and mixed use developments. We will also revive our seaside towns by investing in the infrastructure, renewal and regeneration of communities.

The Minister for Business, Enterprise, Technology and Science (Edwina Hart): I am still awaiting clarification from the UK Government on the operation of enhanced capital allowances. We will have Enterprise Zones, but they will not solve the economic challenges we face, especially in light of the exceptionally modest consequential from the UK Government.

The Minister for Education and Skills (Leighton Andrews): I regularly meet with all teaching unions in Wales, which provides ample opportunity to discuss existing and emerging policy. I have reiterated that the teaching unions are free to write to me at any time and I welcome their input. Teaching unions and other representative teacher groups are routinely invited to respond to formal consultations that are undertaken on individual areas of policy. Unions also have regular opportunities to engage with officials as policies are developed.

Derbyniwyd ateb i'w gyhoeddi ar 19 Medi 2011
Answer received for publication on 19 September 2011

Leighton Andrews: Use of the outdoors to support children and young people's learning experience is important throughout the school curriculum.

Use of the outdoors is a particular feature of the Foundation Phase which places great emphasis on using the outdoors as a teaching and learning environment, where children, allowing them to explore and develop skills including literacy and numeracy in different contexts.

In September 2009, Estyn produced its "Play and Active Toolkit" which identifies the characteristics of good practice through the use of case studies from schools and settings across Wales where the Foundation Phase is flourishing.

A National Training Pack has also been developed in partnership with key stakeholders to support practitioners in both the planning for and delivery of the Foundation Phase. A specific module on Outdoor Learning was published in September 2009 which contains several useful resources to help practitioners make the most out of their outdoor spaces.

Following a series of practitioner workshops in 2009, the Welsh Government produced a Foundation Phase Outdoor Learning handbook that provides practitioners with advice and guidance on making the most of using the outdoor environment for effecting learning. The outdoors and the opportunities it provides for teaching and learning continues to feature in the Department's annual round of practitioner workshops.

Alongside our work to promote the use of the outdoors in the Foundation Phase, in 2010, the Welsh Government in collaboration with Learning through Landscapes Cymru published 'First steps outdoors: a guide to making the most of your outdoor spaces'. The guide provides advice, case studies, activities and resources that will help practitioners make the most of developing outdoor spaces and provide good quality play and learning opportunities.

Since 2008, schools are free to develop more imaginative and innovative ways of delivering the statutory curriculum. Such approaches might include teaching in or out of school to focus on a particular topic. The guidance document 'Making the most of learning', published by the Welsh Government in 2008 describes the ways in which the revised curriculum can be implemented.

Learners are given opportunities to carry out fieldwork activities as part of the programmes of study in the geography and science national curriculum for Wales. Learners also participate in outdoor activities as part of the physical education curriculum. Learning outdoors provides opportunities for the development of physical skills in new, sometimes unfamiliar, and often challenging environments.

The guidance document Developing the Curriculum Cymreig helps schools plan and implement the school curriculum by identifying ways to promote the Curriculum Cymreig as part of curriculum development in all subjects. There are opportunities to organise visits to study historical sites and also major features in Wales.

In 2007, the Welsh Government published a guidance document 'Out of classroom learning'. The document seeks to encourage young people to learn about, appreciate and enjoy the natural environment and cultural heritage through first hand experience. Its aims are to:

- inspire teachers to take groups out of school and discover the benefits of 'Out of Classroom' learning;
- guide on the planning required to organise a safe, effective and enjoyable visit; and
- offer guidance as to how to assess the quality of provider for visits.

The document addresses this need and provides support for teachers who are looking to embrace greater use of 'Out of Classroom' learning.

To ask the Minister for the Environment and Sustainable Development

Paul Davies (Preseli Sir Benfro): A wnaiff y Gweinidog amlinellu targedau Llywodraeth Cymru ar gyfer lleihau allyriadau carbon a darparu ffigurau i ddangos ei chynnydd dros y pum mlynedd diwethaf. (WAQ58012)

Paul Davies (Preseli Pembrokeshire): Will the Minister outline the Welsh Government's targets for reducing carbon emissions and provide figures to show their progress over the last five years. (WAQ58012)

Derbyniwyd ateb i'w gyhoeddi ar 19 Medi 2011
Answer received for publication on 19 September 2011

The Minister for the Environment and Sustainable Development (John Griffiths): The Climate Change Strategy for Wales, published in 2010, confirms the Welsh Government's level of ambition in tackling the causes and consequences of climate change. It sets out our commitments, the areas where we will act and how we will work with our partners to reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions. The Strategy also confirms our principal target to reduce GHG emissions by 3% per year from 2011 in areas of devolved competence, against a baseline of average emissions between 2006 and 2010.

The 3% target includes all 'direct' greenhouse gas emissions in Wales except those from heavy industry and power generation as these are covered by the EU Emissions Trading Scheme and are not within devolved competence. However, as we recognise the importance of reducing electricity consumption in order to reduce emissions, we will be including emissions from large power plants within the 3% target by assigning them to the end-user of the electricity that they generate. The Climate Change Strategy confirms a range of sector-specific emission reduction targets also.

Progress against measuring the 3% target will be assessed by a comparison between the level of emissions and the baseline. We have committed to reporting on progress on an annual basis to the National Assembly for Wales, and we anticipate that our first progress report will be completed by the end of March 2012.

As the disaggregated GHG inventory figures are released twenty-one months after the end of the year on which the inventory is reporting, the most recent emission figures for Wales are for 2009. Consequently, the direct assessment of progress in delivering the target for the first target year (2011) will be set out in our March 2014 progress report. Table 1 sets out the GHG emissions for Wales that would fall within the definition of the 3% target for the five years up to 2009.

GHG emissions for Wales that would fall within the definition of the 3% devolved competence annual emission target.

	2005	3% target baseline years (which will also include 2010)
		2006	2007	2008	2009
GHG emissions (Mt CO <sub>2</sub> e – million tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents)	35.9	36.7	34.6	33.0	30.1

The Welsh Government is also committed to achieving at least a 40% reduction in all GHG emissions in Wales by 2020 against a 1990 baseline. The 1990 baseline emissions for this target are 55.7 MtCO<sub>2</sub>e (million tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents). Comparing the most recent inventory figures against the 1990 baseline, emissions in 2009 (42.6 MtCO<sub>2</sub>e) were 23.5% lower than emissions in 1990.

Table 2.

GHG emissions for Wales that fall within the definition of the 40% emission reduction target.

	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
GHG emissions (Mt CO <sub>2</sub> e – million tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents)	49.5	50.4	47.3	49.3	42.6

As the 40% target covers all GHG emissions (including those from areas that do not fall within devolved competence) it is not directly comparable to the 3% target. Table 2 sets out the GHG emissions for Wales that fall within the definition of the 40% target for the five years up to 2009.

Andrew RT Davies (South Wales Central): What percentage of residual household waste is transported out of Wales for recycling, and will the Minister provide details of where the waste is taken to. (WAQ58017)

Derbyniwyd ateb i'w gyhoeddi ar 19 Medi 2011

Answer received for publication on 19 September 2011

John Griffiths: The table below shows that approximately 47.4% of residual household waste has been transported outside of Wales to England for recycling in 2009-10. The remaining residual household waste was recycled in Wales (37.9%) or the location is unidentifiable (14.7%).

Residual waste recycled by Welsh local authorities 2009-10***

	Residual Municipal waste 2009-10 (tonnes)	Estimated household split 2009-10 (tonnes)	Estimated household proportion by location 2009-10 (%)
Recycled in Wales	1,184	1,028	37.88
Sent to England for recycling	1,481	1,286	47.40
Unidentifiable	460	399	14.71
Total Residual Recycling	3,124	2,714	100

In order to respond to your question in establishing where residual household waste has been transported for recycling, the percentage of residual municipal waste (excluding abandoned vehicles) sent by or on behalf of Welsh local authorities for recycling must be used. Although tonnages of the household/non-household waste are known at point of collection, it is not possible to obtain exact figures for this split on a facility basis. This is because collected household waste becomes mixed with non household waste when sent for treatment/disposal. Therefore, the table above is based on the percentage of overall residual recycling of municipal waste arising in Wales (column 1) and a household split has been obtained by applying the known ratio split of household/non household waste collected. The household figures are therefore based on estimations only.

This is the recycling of purely residual waste, but will include some waste collected as recycle that has become residual waste, for example the MRF reject from co-mingled recycle, which is sent on to a residual MRF. 'Unidentifiable' also includes residual waste sent direct to other/exempt landfills, whereby the address details are unknown. Some Local Authorities may also have selected the headquarters address of waste sites in the UK when selecting the destination, which may not necessarily be the exact site where waste is sent.

Local Authorities in Wales were required to report the end UK destination in 2009/10 into Wastedataflow, so even if they provide a site in England, Wales or Scotland, it may have been exported on from there. Following on from this, it is possible that an authority is not able to ascertain the end destination, so will trace waste as far as reasonably possible. Work is ongoing to improve the reporting of final end destinations of Welsh local authority collected municipal waste within Wastedataflow.

*2009/10 is the latest full year of validated Wastedataflow final data

Lesley Griffiths: The table below sets out the additional central palliative and end of life care funding offered by the Welsh Government to independent hospices, to deliver objectives set annually as part of their 3 year Funding Agreements, for the financial years requested.

This funding is based on a robust formula developed by the Palliative Care Implementation Board (PCIB) to fund hospices for the clinical consultant led services provided on behalf of the NHS. Progress against the annual funding objectives is reviewed by the PCIB to help inform its advice to the Welsh Government on the level and use of actual funding for each subsequent financial year.
