Dear Andrew,

Thank you for your question to me on 25 January asking for a breakdown of how financial savings from the road freeze have been used to provide sustainable transport. I promised to write to you with a substantive response.

Schemes considered by the roads review are all at the development stage so any potential savings would be realised in future rather than to date.

Our draft budget set out how we will invest across different transport modes in line with the sustainable transport hierarchy. The sustainable transport hierarchy guides our spending decisions and gives priority to walking and cycling and public transport, followed by ultra-low emissions and finally private vehicles.

We will shortly publish our National Transport Delivery Plan, setting out the policies, programmes and projects we plan to invest in across all modes to deliver our transport strategy.

Yours sincerely
